

What They Could Do, They Did

You will not have to beg
You will not have to beg for anyone's love
You will not have to beg for anyone's money

Free-form collective returns, by invitation, to their stronghold at Edinburgh's Forest Café, mapping territories across performance, music and art for their debut at the Edinburgh Fringe.

Occupying the Forest for the first week of the festival, the café, performance space and TotalKunst's gallery come under invasion from this group of misbegotten art-spawn.

Following conception in 2006 at the Forest Café, London-based What They Could Do, They Did continues to program events that are free and open to all, operating outside of standard venues and structures. Inviting audiences to become complicit in an artistic practice, What They Could Do, They Did is as committed to interdisciplinarity as it is to creative challenge and collaboration.

Workshops, live performances and exhibition combine for a week of knife-edge-walking delights.

August 5th - 11th 2007

Daily, 12pm until late

The Forest Café

3 Bristo Place, Edinburgh

Free

Amy Houston
07747 538 537

www.theydid.org.uk
press@theydid.org.uk

Hestia Peppé
07828 125 211